Sec. 10-3-205. General Regulations

(2) Operators shall maintain the property_dwelling as their primary residence, as indicated on a state-issued license or identification cardor other documentation deemed acceptable by the Zoning Administrator.

Question #2 was introduced: Who is the STR operator and what are the requirements and responsibilities of the operator? What are the expectations of the operator? Ms. Dang reviewed the memorandum stating that the term "operator" is defined by the Virginia Code and that staff recommended continuing to reference the Virginia Code definition, which would be further defined and regulated by the Harrisonburg ZO.

The group discussed whether STRs approved by SUP should require the operator to be present during the lodging period or not, and if the operator should be required to maintain the STR as their primary residence. Opinions were expressed that homestays are like home businesses and there was discussion of whether operators should be present during the lodging period or not. The group agreed that for homestays the dwelling should be the operator's primary residence. There were differing opinions expressed whether STRs are more like a commercial business and whether the operator should or should not be required to be present, and whether the STR should also be the operator's primary residence.

Concern was raised that people are going to claim a property as their primary residence, when it may not be. Staff responded that they would use a collection of evidence, including, but not limited to, utility bills, driver's license, tax returns, and/or voter registration cards, to determine a person's primary residence.

Commissioners agreed that both by right homestays and STR SUPs should require that the dwelling be the operator's primary residence and that if the operator is not the property owner, then the operator must be present during the lodging period.

Recommendation
